

THE MORRISTOWN GAZETTE

WEDNESDAY, NOV. 13, 1878.

Gen. Joe E. Johnston is elected to Congress from the Richmond, Va. district. Glorious, old Joe!

We are without the official vote in the Senatorial race in this district. Patton, however, is elected by a very large majority.

Tom Cain's majority in Hamblen and Grainger counties is 391 votes. A larger majority than any Democrat ever received in the counties before. But Tom is a man of extensive acquaintance and great popularity. Everybody likes him and he will make a splendid working member, if indeed they do not make him Speaker of the House.

TAYLOR'S MAJORITY.

We have not been able to get the official vote of all the counties composing the First Congressional District. There are two reports of the majority in Claiborne county. We take the smallest, and present this table as nearly correct as we can now make it:

Taylor's maj.	Pettibone's maj.
Sullivan.....1125	Carter.....270
Washington.....236	Johnson.....270
Greene.....170	Coke.....178
Hamblen.....103	Hancock.....278
Grainger.....103	Hawkins.....45
Claiborne.....100

Taylor's majority 905.

AN IMPORTANT DECISION.

We give below the note, published in the Chronicle of Sunday, of the decision of the Supreme Court in the case known as the Morrilltown Bond Case. One of the attorneys in the case tells us that the note contains the decision of only one of several points raised in the case, and that from it he cannot tell whether the bonds were fully sustained or only partially. So far as it goes, however, it is in favor of the bond holders.

Carrier vs. Mayor and Aldermen of Morrilltown—Bonds issued by a municipal corporation, under an act of the Legislature which authorizes their issuance, if upon an ordinance of the qualified voters at an election held under the direction of the Board, a majority of those voting should be secured against the proposition, are valid, if an ordinance, although loosely worded, is passed in favor of the issuance, and the Board find that an election was held and a majority of the votes cast was in favor of the issuance, and their validity will not be affected by irregularities in the election, or the mode of issuance.

Turney, J., dissentent.

THE ELECTIONS LAST WEEK.

Elections in thirty-one States were held last week. The returns are not yet sufficiently full to determine the result accurately of the Congressional returns. The Democrats lost in the North and Northwest and gained in the South. Enough is known, however, to determine the fact that the next House will be Democratic by a small majority. But one obstacle is in the way of relief to the people—that is the President. The Senate and the House will be Democratic, but the people can never get what they want until we have a Democratic President. Ben Butler, the leader of the National Greenback Workingmen's Communitarian organization, was badly slaughtered in Massachusetts. He was buried by about 40,000 majority. Talbot, the Republican candidate beat him for Governor. The election of Republican legislatures in New York and Pennsylvania insures the return of Conkline and Cameron to the Senate. Money is said to have been lavishly used in securing the seats of these eminent Republican leaders.

HONOR TO WHOM HONOR IS DUE.

In the election of Hon. R. L. Taylor over the Republican lion in the First district, there is enough of victory to fill the heart of every friend of the people with pride and joy. We can afford all over the district to claim the result as our victory. From Sullivan to Claiborne, from Johnson to Hamblen it is our victory. We can afford to rejoice together in the result without making invidious comparisons. Nevertheless an analysis of results makes us feel proud of our end of the district. The lower end is full of able men—popular men—who deserve to be honored by their fellow citizens. Here is the home of McFarland, Capt. J. C. Hodges, King, Dickson, Langhorne, Shields, Fulkerson, any one of whom is able to fill a seat in the National legislature with honor to himself and his constituents. Several of these names were, before the canvass opened, favorably mentioned in reference to the race. The boy from Carter, however, was chosen as our standard-bearer, and at once all these men wheeled into line. King and Dickson taking the stump, and the result of their efforts and their loyalty is visible in hand some majorities for Taylor in the Republican counties of Hamblen, Grainger, Claiborne, and in a wonderful shrinkage of the Republican majority at the home of Langhorne. Had old Sullivan and Hawkins done as well, Bob Taylor's majority would have reached two thousand votes. We are surprised at the meagre majority in Sullivan, and we doubt if the same loyalty was evinced there that showed itself in the lower end of the district.

OUR KNOXVILLE LETTER.

KNOXVILLE, Nov. 9, 1878.

To the Editor of the Morrilltown Gazette:

RUMORS OF A NEW REPUBLICAN PAPER.

For a day or two past it has been rumored on our streets that a new Republican paper would soon be started in this city under the auspices of Messrs. Hook & Gibson. The latter gentleman, you know, is Hook's partner in law, and was an active and vigilant supporter of Hook's election. I have heard it said that he furnished him with the "sinecure of war," and, in many ways, did him effective service. If the newspaper is inaugurated—and I imagine it will be—Gibson will stand at the head of it, will be editor-in-chief, furnish the brains and the greenbacks to keep it afloat. It is apparent that he and the late Congressman elect propose to be the leaders of the Republican party in this district and to throw the Chronicle and its editor, Capt. Rube, into the shade, or rather knock the concern into a "cocked hat." There is a terrible feud existing between the Hook-faction and the Rule-faction, but why the former should be so embittered against the latter in view of the notorious fact that the Chronicle conducted itself so quietly and respectably towards Hook in his contest for Congress, is something the "common herd" do not understand.

RUMORS OF A NEW DEMOCRATIC ORGAN.

In the meantime there are also active rumors to the effect that another Democratic paper, daily and weekly, will, more than likely, come to the surface. It is strongly talked of and urgently demanded by a number of the trust Democrats and most influential citizens in our city. The country has two prominent gentlemen near Strawberry Plains informed the writer the other day that there was, in the immediate section, a universal clamor for the establishment of such a journal. They further remarked that a large patronage could be secured. Here in Knoxville the feeling is irresistible to have a paper so freed from private parties and huge corporations as to make it the organ of independent thought and the exponent of sound Democratic principles. How the matter will end, I can't say, but, judging from all I have seen and heard, it is quite probable that the paper in question will, some of these days before long, be given to the public.

THE GAZETTE ENDORSED.

You have made many friends by your editorial course with reference to Hon. A. G. Watkins. You have scores and scores of "retainers" who will retain you in the future to tell the truth and to battle for the right. He was defeated by the indifference and the active opposition of some Democrats, the majority, if not all, of whom were in favor of one James Sevier, an acknowledged Republican and so pronounced to be by the Knoxville Chronicle.

VICTORY IN THE EAST.

I mean, my dear sir, in the upper district. I rejoice with you, as every true Democrat will in all parts of the State. While I did not and could not, without stifling every instinct of my manhood, endorse the idea of persecuting Major Pettibone on account of his nativity, at the same time I could not be otherwise than intensely favorable to the election of Rube L. Taylor. An opposite desire would have been basely treacherous to the Democratic party, a despicable stab at most worthy and talented young gentlemen; not only so, but a blow at two of his nearest kinsmen—his father and uncle. Col. Landen C. Haynes, deceased, both of whom I have always respected not only on account of their personal worth, which was without a stain, but on account of their splendid abilities. Young Taylor is a "chip of the old block" and has running in his veins the blood of two of the most eloquent and effective orators Tennessee has ever produced.

THOS. C. CAIN.

Give me your hand, Tom! You always carry it next to your heart, and it grips the hand of a fellow man warmly and vigorously. The writer has cause to thank you for more than one act of generosity, and no one more sincerely rejoices in your recent triumph before the gallant people of Hamblen county. Good! If you are as successful as the Republican legislatures in New York and Pennsylvania insures the return of Conkline and Cameron to the Senate. Money is said to have been lavishly used in securing the seats of these eminent Republican leaders.

EVERYTHING LOST HERE.

Our entire ticket went by the board, as you are aware. Mabry was beaten by 23 votes. Ledgerwood by a small majority and Offutt by about four hundred. A small vote was polled and but little interest manifested.

DEMOCRAT.

The Avonlea has a word to say about the "Old Man," who announced several days ago that he had retired. The "Old Man" is a myth. He is a living man, fifty-one years old, and his name is Frederick S. Nichols. For nine years he has been the foreman of the Avonlea, in charge of the composing room, and made up the forms, and never missed a night. During the carnival which the plague of cholera wrote, not for those who were absent, but for those who were in the black circle of death. A man without guile or bitterness, with malice towards none, a lover of truth and a lover of the rugged truth, and a lover of his fellow men, is the "Old Man" of the Avonlea, who was able to cheer the hearts of those who were in the black circle of death; for them he labored, and for them he was willing to die.

We are very glad the "old man" pulled safely through the great perils that environed him while he stood so heroically at his post during the entire carnival plague held; and confess to a degree of sadness in parting with him. True, as the Jackson Tribune says, he said a good many harsh things about his neighbors that should not have been said, played the ball in the china shop to perfection, and was most ridiculous, and yet charmingly inconsistent in everything, and yet we shall miss his droll humor, his sharp sarcasms, his reckless slashings, and hence we are sorry that the very absurd, but very entertaining "old man" has retired to his "den." We are quite satisfied that there are many in and out of Memphis who would like to pull the "old man" nose, for he abused men recklessly, and swore around "like the army in Flanders," and made men and communities "red hot" with resentment, inspired endless columns of profane literature, and like a Persian, lied himself, no doubt, most generously—and yet we must say that we recognize in the "old man" a humorist of no mean order.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

BRUCE, P. O., Greene Co., Tenn., November 9, 1878.

To the Editor of the Morrilltown Gazette:

When I last wrote to you I was at Chestnut Bloom P. O., four miles from your town, and in that letter I told you my next would be from somewhere else, and Bruce P. O. is the place. It is in one corner of Greene county, not more than half a mile from Cooke county, nor more than a distance from your own Hamblen.

ANCHORED.

The result of my rusticating a week with W. T. Rippetoe was an engagement to enter his service as a clerk in a store here. He has hired a store house of Robt. A. Lyle and stocked it full of goods, in charge of which he has left me. Consequently I shall not "peregrinate" much in the immediate future, neither shall I write you "Notes and Dots" from the various counties over which I have traveled in your interest for so many months past. But I may, with your leave, furnish your readers the news of events in the corners of the three counties above named, as they transpire; and possibly, observations on men and things, which I may judge will be of interest to them.

THIS PLACE IS KNOWN TO ALL.

This place is known to all as Bruce Post-office, but as Lyle Creek, and as Lyle's. Robert A. Lyle is the owner of a large landed property on the rich bottoms of Nolichucky river, in Postmaster, consequently a man of consequence. Lyle Creek flows directly by the store-house where your correspondent, Mr. Lyle, is writing you "Notes and Dots," clothing, hardware, and what is not so hard, medicines, besides ceteris in proportion, except when it (Lyle Creek, remember,) is dammed (?) by backwater from Nolichucky river, when it comes up inconveniently near to the store for real comfort, and in urgent cases crowds people and goods out and off the lower floor of the building. The people in the near vicinity press themselves as highly pleased because Mr. Rippetoe has had the enterprise to fill this store-house with goods, and promises him abundant patronage.

IMPROVEMENTS.

I learn that Turner Gillan intends to erect a blacksmith shop here soon.

WILD DUCKS.

Tuesday, just at night, the air was made alive with the noise of numbers of wild ducks, right from their summer haunts way up north. They circled round and round for half an hour or so, as if examining a pond, not a quarter of a mile from my headquarters, to see if it was a suitable and safe place for their abode during the night. Their approach made Mr. Rippetoe nervous for want of a gun to bring a "mess" of them down, but he was not ready for them and he had to wait a day.

Wednesday night he made up for the loss of the previous one and went out to slay the ducks with two guns, and as he is an excellent marksman, he punished some severely for their temerity in approaching so near to human habitations. The result was, I was served, the next day for dinner, with nice, well-cooked duck at the Hotel de Lyle table, where I board. Mr. R. repeated the experiment, with like success, Thursday night.

FIRE.

On Tuesday last, the house of John Knight was burned to the ground with all its contents. He lives not far from here, is a poor man and has the sympathy of the "bottom people" for his severe loss, and I would not wonder if the "bottom dollar" of some of his neighbors does not slip into his hands to relieve him. His wife, as well as himself, was absent from home when the fire occurred. Several small children were about the premises, but they are not able to tell how the fire originated. No one was harmed. It is not known how the house was set on fire. J. S. W.

THE RESULT IN BLOUNT.

MARYVILLE, Tenn., Nov. 7, 1878.

To the Editor of the Morrilltown Gazette:

The great battle has been fought and the victory is accorded to the Democracy. We had a four hundred vote majority for Representative Taylor, a few days before the election Col. Love drew off and left the race to Messrs. Rowan, Brickell and Scott. Rowan claimed to be the Republican candidate; Brickell became the Democratic; and Scott held on to his Independent position, which drove the man and brother to Rowan—for the colored brother can't take anything mixed. Nothing but the sheer pure unadulterated will they take in their market. So the race narrowed down to Brickell and Rowan. Brickell is elected by a small majority. Scott, who is a colored man, and who all the time espoused the interests of his race, but not Radical, only got 15 votes out of 600 colored voters. He hung to his colors to the last, willing to die in the last ditch, but all to no purpose. He contended for the freedom of his race, and that was considered admirable.

There is great mourning in the camps of Israel. Teodius, the Goliath, has been slain at least one-third of his power. A man named Watkins played havoc with many of his disciples of the truth and faithful. It is rumored he is from the Eastern part.

We have cheering news from the First district. Reuben the Great has fallen. The Mountain Fiddler is playing the dead march, and the Great Revenue Ring at the Metropolitan city has been torn asunder. In the language of Prof. Jasper, "the world do move."

As I now write, the stillness of death pervades our town. No bon-fire burning—all quiet. The following lines will be inscribed on the tomb of the departed.

Radicalism, here it lies,
Nobody laughs, nobody cries;
Where it's gone, or how it fares,
Nobody knows—nobody cares.

OZE OF THE BOYS.

Notwithstanding the defeat of our friend, Capt. Ledgerwood, the Democratic candidate, we are gratified to know that the Fourth Senatorial district will be represented by a gentleman in every way worthy of the position. Mr. Samuell, the Senator elect, is a self-made man, a fair lawyer, honest and upright, and having served as a Representative in the lower house, will be easy in his new position. He was a soldier in the First Tennessee Cavalry, U. S. V., and sustained the character of a good soldier. In fact, our friend Dick always equaled himself honorably in every position he has occupied, either as plow boy, lawyer or legislator.

Thursday, November 28, is designated for National thanksgiving and prayer.

EARNEST &amp; BRISCOE.

A correspondent of the Troy Times, writing from New York, and evidently a close observer of things in that city, talks thus philosophically of newspaper advertising: "The autumn trade is now in full activity, and business men are exerting every effort to improve the harvest. One method is the hand-bill system, by which the hotels are daily inundated. During the business season one boy after another will go the rounds, and in this way an attempt is made to obtain trade. Of these, however, the greater part are wasted, since the waiter generally picks them up and throws them into the street, and the next day a fresh inundation takes place. Experience has clearly demonstrated that the most efficient method of advertising is found in the judicious use of the newspaper columns. The grounds on which newspaper advertising, as a system, is based is human confidence, since we cannot avoid believing that which we constantly read. This confidence is sometimes abused, but still it is evident that a good advertisement will, if sufficiently repeated, carry popular opinion. Men who advertise with the greatest persistency eventually reach success. This method, and the article above referred to, should be pressed on the public by repeated assaults. The correct view, which experience brings to each man, is that advertising should be included in the general estimate of expense, as regularly as store rent, clerk hire and insurance. It is often said a good stand at a high price is better than a poor one at a low price. Well, advertising brings a man before the public in the way that makes any 'stand' good. The best stand you can have is to be in the newspapers." So Earnest & Briscoe think, and so they renew their prominent position in the Gazette. Mr. Dan Briscoe has but recently returned from the East where he purchased, for cash, the largest, most stylish and desirable stock of fall and winter goods ever before brought to this market. An examination of their mammoth stock, in its various departments, will satisfy any one that it surpasses all former efforts in regard to new and elegant goods. Besides their full and complete line of every description of ladies' dress goods and under wear, their clothing department is filled with the largest and handsomest stock of gents' winter clothing ever before received in this town.

The public are generally invited to call and examine for themselves a display of men's, youth's and boy's suits unsurpassed in quality and cheapness of price by any house in East Tennessee. A full line of gents' furnishing goods and under wear always on hand. Call and examine their stock.

The editor of the Morrilltown Gazette proves himself equal to the emergency, and takes upon himself all the responsibility of the last week's "improvements" of that sheet, in reference to this paper. This was what was expected and required of him by his retainers, and we take pleasure in commending his conduct in an emergency, or to point the moral so forcibly taught by the figures. If, in so doing, we shall find it convenient to make an enemy of the Gazette, by way of illustrating a folly, or enforcing a warning, we may do so. Otherwise, its wandering idiosyncrasy cannot be a matter of any concern to us or the public.—Knoxville Tribune.

That's fair! It indicates, too, a sense of obligation to do something. We will, therefore, be hopefully patient. If the Tribune can establish that it did not monopolize more than the share of political ideas that ought to attach to a veteran who for "fifteen years has served the Democratic party with watchful care," by its course in the late Congressional canvass in its district, it will be well. As it is now, hosts of its old friends would rejoice to see "Johnny come marching back," clothed and in his right mind.

The slickest and best job put up since the Manhattan Savings Bank burglary, was that of Johnson's jewelry store on Eighth avenue, New York, last Friday. It was a robbery of $2,000 worth of clocks and watches in the presence of a large number of passers-by. Shortly after 6 o'clock two men entered the store. One closed the door while the other kept in their places by a revolver Mr. Johnson, the proprietor, his clerk and a customer. Two others smashed the large plate windows, packed in two bags the stock exposed, and the three men, armed with pistols, ordered the passers-by to move on. The property having been packed up the thieves, still protected by their companions, moved quickly to a butchers cart in waiting at the corner door rapidly away. The two who had kept in the store, one receiving a preconcerted signal, turned on the strong, fired their pistols in the air. A stampede of the people followed, and the thieves all made their escape.

A telegraphic dispatch from Columbia, S. C., brings news of a serious injury sustained by Gov. Wade Hampton on last Thursday. He, with his friends, was hunting deer near Columbia when the bullet from the gun of the store, reached, and the brittle breaking Governor Hampton leaped from the saddle, sustaining severe injuries in his fall. His right leg was broken below the knee, the bones protruding, and his ankle was badly hurt. His injuries will probably keep him confined to his bed for a long time.

Miss Julia Donahoe, a young lady of Knoxville, was seriously burned by fire last Friday evening. She was in a room by herself, and the fire was burning in the grate, and raising up to reach for something on the mantle piece, her clothing caught fire and flamed up at a furious rate. She was panic-stricken, and not knowing what to do, ran screaming out through the yard to the street, her velocity adding fuel to the flames until she was entirely enveloped. Her condition is regarded as critical.

The Methodist of last week contains the valdictory of Rev. J. A. Lyons, late editor of that journal. He voluntarily retires from the management of the paper to return to the regular pastoral work. In doing so, he carries with him the increased esteem and confidence of his ministerial brethren and the benedictions of thousands of readers of the Methodist, whom he has so ably and efficiently served. We wish our talented and esteemed young friend great success in his new relation, and but echo the desire of every reader of the Methodist in expressing the hope that he may find time amid his pressing duties to frequently enrich the columns of the paper with his sparkling productions.

SYNOD OF NASHVILLE.

The Synod of Nashville met here Thursday evening last. The attendance was not large, some fifty odd members only being in attendance. The opening sermon was preached by Dr. Jas. Park, from Isaiah XLII, 28th, the leading thought being the duty of Christians to trust God in everything, and the grounds of that trust. Rev. J. W. Lupton, of Nashville Presbytery, was elected Moderator, and Rev. Alex. Cowan and W. P. Brewer, Clerks. The Synod then adjourned until 8 o'clock Friday morning. The first half hour of each day was spent as usual in devotional exercises. After calling the roll, and reading of the records, the standing committees, on bills and overtures, judicial committee on the narrative, auditing accounts, minutes of the general assembly, statistics, Sunday schools, traveling expenses, synodical tax, devotional exercises, etc., were all appointed and at once entered upon their various duties. Preaching every morning at 11 o'clock, and every evening at 7. The pulpit of the Methodist Church was filled Sabbath morning and evening by members of the Synod. The various committees made their reports which were received, discussed and adopted. Resolutions prevailed throughout the entire session, which made it a very pleasant Synod. Adjourned Saturday evening four and half o'clock.

Speaking of the late annual session of the Synod of Tennessee, Mr. McAnally, of the St. Louis Christian Advocate, says: "Next Conference will be held at Abingdon, Va. In December, 1880, an annual Conference was held in the same town, at which the present writer was received on trial, since when he has not been local, nor supernumerary, nor superannuated, nor without a regular appointment for a single year, month, week or day; and, if he lives, and can, by any lawful means, he will be present at the Conference there in 1879, just fifty years from the time he was received on trial, and, if able and an opportunity given him, he will, then and there, deliver his semi-centennial sermon." And "may we be there to see" and hear!

Many of our readers will be shocked with regret, as we were, to hear of the death of Maj. W. P. Elliott, of Knoxville. He died near Nashville last Saturday. He was in his 48th year of age. We have known him intimately and well since 1852, when he removed from Pennsylvania and adopted Knoxville as his home. He was an intelligent and trustworthy business man and a genial, generous hearted gentleman, possessing the noblest qualities of humanity. A host of friends will mourn his untimely death. To his bereaved wife and son we tender our sincere sympathies.

Knoxville Chronicle: The railroad authorities, with characteristic generosity, have agreed to convey all returning refugees to their homes for half fare over the road. The noble, manly and magnanimous conduct of our railroad officials during the great war, and the fact that they have suffered incalculable loss from the stagnation of business, etc., deserves to and will render them to all good citizens, and give them a place in their memory never to be eradicated.

Memphis Leader: An old citizen who went off early in the epidemic and came back the day before the election to get in his vote, was looking over one of the numerous tickets printed. "Why, all these fellows stand here during the yellow fever, didn't they?" he inquired. "Yes, I believe they did," was the reply. "Well, do you think such d—d fools are fit to go to the legislature?" But he doubled up the ticket and put it in.

Of "the wild man captured near Sparta," the Courier-Journal's account of which is published on our outside, Dr. Wright, of the Clarksville Chronicle, has this to say: "We saw that wild man who was captured near Sparta, Tennessee, a few weeks since. There was nothing particularly wonderful about him, save his scales; they looked like an aggravated case of the 'mange.' We are not astonished at his wanting to get in the water very frequently; he certainly needed it. There is a good deal of Barnum in the wild man."

Abijah Fowler, one of the oldest citizens of Monroe county, and author of Fowler's Arithmetic, for a number of years extensively used in the schools of this section, died at his home on Cain Creek, Monroe county, on the 8th inst. He was about 72 years old, and a much respected citizen.

Jim Neal, for information of those who are discussing the question, desires us to say that the first newspaper published in Morrilltown was called the American Statesman. It was Whig in politics, and published and edited by W. J. Craig, in 1858.

The following ruling of the Postoffice Department is published in the United States Official Postal Guide for October, and should be more generally known to the public: "A letter having been once delivered in accordance with the address, the jurisdiction of the Department has ceased; therefore, if it is desired to be again transmitted in the mails, it will have to be prepaid anew."

A correspondent of the Dupont Reflector, writing of East Tennessee matters and things in general, among other things says: "D. G. Mansard is stirring up things in the Mulberry Gap and Clinton Associations. He is an enthusiast on education and Sunday Schools, the two most useful things in our mountain counties. It is to be hoped that things may become so lively in the Associations that the fire may extend to others, until all East Tennessee shall blaze with consuming saintly fires. A few live, educated men stationed among our mountaineers and valleys, would work the same on our social, moral and religious advancement."

Mr. Joseph A. Kenner, wife and two children, and Charles S. Mitchell, all of Rogersville, took the western bound mail train yesterday morning, having through tickets to San Francisco. Mr. Kenner expects to locate his family at Oakland, California, and himself go into the service of the California and Oregon Emigrant Association. He is a gentleman esteemed by all who know him, and has many a good wish to follow him.

The body of A. T. Stewart was stolen from the family vault, Nov. 7. A reward of $25,000 offered for its recovery.

At Cost.

Mrs. Fannie Newcomb is closing out an exquisite line of Hosiery at cost. The same goods sold a few months since for double the price which they are now offered at. Call at her Millinery store and see.

Remember that you get as much of Greenhalge's Restorative for 50c as you do of other kinds for $1, and its actually better. Try it and be convinced. Sold by G. A. McNutt, Morrilltown.

Thanks to Rodgers & Perry, Knoxville, for valuable "pub. doc." But keep "mum to the Gov'nor," William.
